March, 1985, Las Colinas Jail - Donna Gentile predicted her own murder. In June, 1985, Donna was found dead with gravel stuffed in her mouth. Her autopsy was sealed. Her autopsy was the FIRST AUTOPSY TO BE SEALED in the city of San Diego. Why?

Donna, a trailblazer, carved a path for women in this current climate, the era of #MeToo. She recorded a tape for CBS News. Her spoken words, "I feel someone in a uniform with a badge can still be a serious criminal". This is the true story of the stolen life of the author's first cousin, a 22-year old Philadelphia native. A prostitute, police corruption informant, trapped in a scandal where two policeman were fired as a result of her testimony. No one should have to be both a criminal and a victim. This sharp-edged story circles both a scandal and a sting.
